Campaign Rhymes.

In hallo's Herrick claims to see
A remedy for all our ills;
But his majority will be
A good deal smaller than his pills.
What can this latest wrinkle mean?
Just stop a bit and hold your horses;
The Mugwumps running the machine,
The Democrats, the pretence bosses.
Said Herrick to Harris, "Ain't it fine,
To pull those Democrats into line?"
Said Garrard to Burke, "I've a strong desire
To pull some chestnuts out of the fire."
And Haggerty queried of Overland
Pat,
"Which is the Monkey, and which is the Cat?"

NEW TODAY.

ALL SORTS.

—BORN—In Carson City, October 7, 1886, to the wife of Charles Stewart, a daughter.

—It is whispered that there will be another effort to pass the Military Bill this Winter.

—It is proposed to envoke Government aid to sink the Combination shaft to 5,000 feet.

—The ladies of the Episcopal Church will give one of their pleasant sociables at the Army Hall on Wednesday eve., Sept. 13. There will be dancing and refreshments.

—A peculiar virtue in Ayer's Sarsaparilla is that while it cleanses and purges the blood from all corruptions and impurities, and thereby roots out disease, it builds up and invigorates the whole system, and makes one young again.

—Many forget that the hair and scalp need cleansing as well as the hands and feet. Extensive use of Ayer's Hair Vigor has proven that it is the best cleansing agent for the hair—that it prevents as well as removes dandruff, cools and soothes the scalp, and stimulates the hair to renewed growth and beauty.

When baby was sick, we gave her Castoria. When she was a child she cried for Castoria. When she became a lady she clung to Castoria. When she married she gave her Castoria.

Slightly Mixed.

The other day W. J. Marsh, the Short-horn cattle breeder, was on the train going to the Fair when he was introduced to Miss Adkinson, the artist. Presently a conversation started up relative to the exhibits, Miss Adkinson thinking of nothing but art, and Marsh thinking of nothing but Short-horns.

"I think the main trouble is with the classifications," said Miss Adkinson.

"The classifications I consider all right," replied Marsh, "according to age."

"Of course," said the young lady, "age is considered in such things, but I hardly think there will be anything down there sufficiently aged to count."

"Oh, yes," rejoined Marsh, "I have some exhibits there myself."

"Indeed."

"And when the merits of the two are pretty near alike the tape line settles it."

Here Marsh pulled a carpenter's tape line out of his pocket, such as winds up with a spring inside a leather case.

A frown passed over Miss Adkinson's face, but she checked her repugnance of the idea and smilingly answered:

"You don't really mean that, Mr. Marsh?"

"Oh, yes, the size settles it with me every time."

"In that case I suppose a large frame is all you ask."

"You must have big frame to start on. I have always held to that. You can't succeed with small framed stock. I tell you its just a waste of time."

"Then a great big daub by an inferior artist you consider better than a little gem by a painter of reputation."

"What's that? A great big daub! I hope you don't call my Prince of Oxford, right down from the Datchess of Airdrie Second, a daub?"

"I have never seen the pictures, Mr. Marsh."

"Pictures."

"Yes, I am speaking of pictures at the Pavilion."

"Oh! I am speaking of my Short-horns at the grounds."

Here both burst into a hearty laugh in which a number of passengers joined, and Marsh never said a word until the train passed Steamboat.

Life Like Portraits.

The crayon pictures of Sheriff Crisler's twins in Cagwin & Notewares window are the speaking portraits of the little ones. They are much admired and are the work of Schnieder the artist.

The Races Coming.

Cap. Avery got a dispatch from E. B. Johnson, Chico, that he would bring 30 horses here next week for the races. There will be racing all the week.

THE STILL-HUNTER'S RETURN.

Ready to let Hock Call Him "Jewett" Once More.

The Enterprise of yesterday has the following:

Governor Adams has returned from the eastern part of the State. He has been on what may be called a still hunt. He understood that the prairies would be fired behind him by the Bradley faction, and went out to see if the conflagration might not in some manner be averted.

The Governor does not seem to be entirely happy since his return. He moves among his friends with less celerity than is his wont. He walks as if he had been frost-bitten, and an overdose of quinine had created a buzzing in his ears. Through force of habit he shakes hands with every one he meets, but the salutation, once so apparently guileless and hearty, has become curt and perfunctory. He has changed, indeed, else he would not have said to Hock Mason, meeting that sturdy and still irate old rancher in front of the Capitol, last Monday: "You may call me Jewett, Hock! you may call me Jewett!"

It is thought that the Governor's strange demeanor is due to the chilly atmosphere encountered by him in Elko and Humboldt counties, from the effects of which he has not yet fully recovered. He has discovered that a gentleman whose name is Stevenson is much talked of in the great East as a marvelously proper man for Governor, and is beginning to discern the faint outlines of a writing on the wall which speaks of something having been weighed and found wanting.

SKIPPED OUT.

The Surveyor of Elko County in Trouble.

The Elko Independent of the 24th says:

Our usually quiet town was thrown into a perfect fever of excitement last evening by the rumor that Eugene Thompson, County Surveyor and Notary Public, had skipped. Our reporter interviewed Henderson Green from whom the following facts were gathered:

Some four months since Thompson applied to Green for a loan of $400, which he obtained by depositing as security a note on Thomas Short, of Ruby Valley, for $800 dated November, 1885.

On Sunday morning Mr. Green received a letter from Short stating that he had neither owed nor had given such a note. Mr. Green then went immediately for deputy Sheriff Taber, and after a few minutes absence returned to find that the bird had flown, and his whereabouts is still a mystery.

Upon inquiry it transpires that numerous friends of Thompson, who placed implicit confidence in his integrity, are left flat for various sums aggregating several hundred dollars.

A party of men who are in pursuit of the fugitive who, it is reported, was seen near the ranch of James Russell, just below town, this morning. Thompson has done a vast amount of surveying during the Summer and has made money rapidly, but the reckless manner of his life for the past few months is evidently the cause of his downfall.

A Real Mermaid.

One of the startling features at the Fair is the famous mermaid, which has astonished and amazed the entire Coast since her ladyship arrived here last Summer. She is to be seen at the race track, in a large tank on a platform to the left of the grand stand, and is in the custody of a thorough going old salt, Capt. Caking, who talks volubly of the inhabitants of the briny deep. The mermaid is a reality, and bears a striking resemblance to a human being above the waist, having a well formed human head, arms and body, the former covered with a thick growth of hair, the arms and back are covered with scales, the hands are webbed and her eyes are those of a fish—lidless—while the extremity from the waist down is that of an ordinary fish, showing the scales, dorsal and caudal fins. The cuticle or skin on the upper portion is human, as are likewise the teeth, comprising the molar, grinders, seizers, etc. There will doubtless be a rush to see the strange amphibian.

LAST NIGHT'S MEETING.

A Rousing Welcome to Mr. Bartine.

There was a large crowd at the Opera House last evening to listen to the oration of Mr. H. F. Bartine. They came to hear a treat and were not disappointed.

The speaker opened his address with a review of the promises made by the Democratic party before the election of Cleveland. His showing of how these promises had all been broken was a masterly arraignment of the two years of Democratic mis-rule which had been such a disappointment all over the Union to both Democrats and Republicans. His points were telling and brought forth rounds of applause.

He also reviewed the strong points of the State ticket, and closed with some good square talk on local politics, which delighted his audience. His speech was quite long, and owing to the lateness of the hour a proper summary of it is impossible.

His allusions to the misanthropic hypochondriacal Mugwumps were particularly happy, and drew forth rounds of laughter and applause.

Will the Fraud Succeed?

The Government of the United States—not the Democratic party—pays William Garrard $3,000 a year for doing nothing for the Government. The services he performs are for the Democratic party, and he has thus far succeeded in satisfying Mr. Cleveland that he earns his wages. His mode of serving the Government is peculiar. He is in the habit of attaching himself to every non-partisan organization which will receive him, and then by a series of jobbery prostitute such organization to political purposes for the benefit of the Democratic party. With a knowing wink he appoints to the Mint and to work on the block the Government purchased for the erection of a building, and suggests the number of fat places they will furnish in the near future. He at first approaches the weak members of the fraternity and gets them to follow him in the hope of spoils, and when he has gathered sufficient force by this artful method he converts one society after another into a political machine. His hungry followers sometimes get impatient and seem to lose faith in his artful promises. But he artfully soothes them, and holds out to their hungering gaze a vast Federal field of patronage, flowing with milk and honey, and luring on to a kind of Elysian the bumbling Micawbers that linger with delight upon his gushing and humanitarian eloquence.

He came very near being cornered of late, and by virtue of earnest appeals to the patriotism of President Cleveland he induced him to stretch out his executive arm to revive the hopes of his fanished followers. All he asked of the President was some order about the mint which would enable him to hold his forces intact until after election. Some order has been made and Garrard has it. What that order is has not been made public, and whispering it to his faithful followers because it is too good for the public to know, or whether it is a cold bug order which he desires to conceal from the public, remains a mystery. One thing is certain—that whatever it is, it is mere electioneering buncombe which will terminate with the election.

As an artful dodger and a "smooth Aliek" this man Garrard must be acknowledged supreme. He has lived in this community and sucked the public teat for more than a quarter of a century. He toils not, neither does he spin, but the stomach of no epicure in the land is more gorgeously lined than his. He neither labors nor employs laborers, still he beguiles many honest toilers, while he fascinates the non-producing community. What other man could draw a large salary himself from the public treasury and keep every cent of it, and satisfy the hungry of this community that he is the most benevolent man on earth? What other man could bribe mechanics and laborers by false promises to make war on their neighbors, who employ and pay them wages upon which to live and support their families?

—The Mugwumps held a caucus over Cohn's store last evening. It was mostly run by Herrick and Leete.
